Voices in the Park

Response

In this story, four people and two dogs meet at the park. The dogs and the children become friends and have a good time. The girl named Smudge was the one who reached out to make friends. The boy named Charlie gave her a flower at the end of the story. This book reminds us of good times we have playing with our friends. When we share and are kind to each other, our world is a happy place.

Voices in the Park

Reflection on Using Fix-Up Options

This book is a little tricky to understand. It is written like four separate stories. When books are difficult to read, we can think a lot and use fix-up options to help us understand what is happening. When we read this book, we asked a lot of questions. We also studied the illustrations. These options helped us make meaning from this book.