Foreword

Remarks from Donor Katherine Schneider, Ph.D., L.P., ABPP
On the occasion of the first presentation of the Schneider Family Book Award
ALA Annual Conference
Orlando, Florida
June 29, 2004

When I was growing up, the librarian at the Michigan Library for the Blind was my hero. He sent me books in Braille and on records from the Library of Congress collection. To be here among librarians who daily enrich people’s lives with information in printed, audio, and electronic formats is a dream come true. That special librarian and my mother who read me many books that were not available in Braille or on records whetted my thirst for knowledge. The upshot of that thirst was a Ph.D. from Purdue and a very satisfying thirty-year career as a clinical psychologist.

During my father’s last illness he joked that I would probably give away my inheritance. I agreed I would, so we needed to find a cause we could agree on—I came up with the Schneider Family Book Award for children’s books about the disability experience. My mother taught the deaf before marriage and worked tirelessly to mainstream their blind child before it was mandated by law. My father worked in the pharmaceutical industry so information about diseases, conditions, and treatments was dinner table conversational material at our house. Extended family members have lived with alcoholism, attention deficit disorder, diabetes, and fibromyalgia.

In the 1950s when I was in grade school, the only media mentions of blind people were of Helen Keller, Louis Braille, and the seven blind men who went to see the elephant. Other disabilities fared no better. Fifty years later we’re here to celebrate the fact that the situation has dramatically improved. The Schneider Family Book Award committee had many wonderful children’s books to consider, which represent the experiences of the one out of seven Americans who have a disability. The disability experience in these wonderful children’s books is a part of a character’s full life, not the focus of the life.
Schneider Family Book Award

Background Information on the Award and the Jury

History of the Award
Dr. Katherine Schneider and her family endowed this American Library Association Award in 2003. Cheryl Malden was the ALA awards liaison tasked to form a committee and to establish the criteria for the award. The committee selected three winners in early 2004 to be honored at the ALA Awards presentation at ALA Annual.

The American Library Association (ALA) staff liaison arranged for the President of ALA to announce the 2005 Schneider Award winners at the ALA Youth Media Award Press Conference where all ALA children’s literature awards are officially announced.

History of the Medal
Children’s book awards traditionally have a medal signifying excellence for publishers to place on award-winning book covers. As there is no universally recognized symbol or sign designating disability, it was difficult to create a medal reflecting the purpose of the Schneider Family Book Award. The original jury worked with a graphic designer and responded to publisher feedback to create a circular seal similar in size to other ALA literary awards. Boys and girls holding hands encircling a small world symbolize the ideal of equal treatment for all children everywhere. The colors silver and blue were selected to differentiate this seal from the usual gold of others. The words at the top of the medal, Schneider Family Book Award, are repeated in Braille at the bottom in homage to Dr. Schneider.

Jury Function Statement
To select three books annually that artistically express the disability experience in conformance with the terms, definitions, and criteria established for the Schneider Family Book Award.

Jury Membership

1. The Jury shall be comprised of seven American Library Association members with experience in book selection and knowledge of disability experiences.

2. Jury members are appointed by the staff liaison and the Chair of ALA Awards, from the Office of Governance of ALA, who also appoints the Jury Chair.

3. The Jury shall include one current member from each of the following ALA divisions: ALSC, the Association for Library Service to Children YALSA, the Young Adult Library Service Association ASCLA, the Association of Specialized and Cooperative Library Agencies
4. One member shall be the children’s or young adult librarian from the Library of Congress, NLS/BPH, who is an ALA member and who may serve for unlimited terms. Alternatively, a librarian from the NLS network of state libraries may be appointed to fill this position on the committee.

5. The normal term on the Jury shall be one year with the option of reappointment for one additional year, from June to June.

6. Previous members may be reappointed after a two-year hiatus.

Terms and Definitions

Three awards are given annually to recognize and honor books for their distinguished portrayal of people living with a disabling condition.

- younger children, ages 0 to 8
- middle grades, ages 9 to 13
- teens, ages 14 to 18.

1. The person with the disability may be the protagonist or a secondary character.

2. Definition of disability. Dr. Schneider has intentionally allowed for a broad interpretation by her wording, the book “must portray some aspect of living with a disability, whether the disability is physical, mental, or emotional.” This allows each committee to decide on the qualifications of particular titles. Books with death as the main theme are generally disqualified.

3. The books must be published in English. The award may be given posthumously.

4. Term of eligibility extends to publications from the preceding year, e.g. 2013 awards are given to titles published in 2012.

5. When a picture book wins the award, the $5000.00 will be divided equally between the author and illustrator.
Criteria

1. Content
   • May be fiction, biography, or other form of nonfiction.
   • Must portray the emotional, mental, or physical disability as part of a full life, not as something to be pitied.
   • Representation of characters with disabilities should be realistic, avoiding exaggeration or stereotypes.
   • Person with disability should be integral to the presentation, not merely a passive bystander.
   • The theme must be appropriate for and respectful of the intended audience age.
   • Information on a disability must be accurate.

2. Style
   • Should be well written
   • Should be engaging with distinctive use of language for plot and character development and setting delineation.
   • Book should be judged on its own merit as a self-contained entity, not as part of a series, and irrespective of supportive materials such as a CD or other supplemental material.

3. Illustration and Design
   • Text and images should complement or enhance each other, with differentiated contrast between text, pictures, and background.
   • Format and typeface must be of age appropriate size, clearly readable, and free of typographical errors.
   • Layout should be easy to follow, enhancing the flow of the story or information.

Jury Work

General statement concerning the work year

The Schneider Family Book Award committee functions from June to June of the following year. The chair and the committee should be appointed by ALA Annual Conference.

Much of the Schneider jury work will take place via an ALA virtual service. Members are responsible for providing the ALA office with the correct contact information. Members are responsible for staying current with jury work.
The working calendar

ALA Annual: Chair and Jury in place.

Post Annual – Dec 1: Nominate/suggest and request reading copies of appropriate titles.
- The ALA office will ask publishers to send requested books to the Jury members. The ALA office is responsible for maintaining up to date list and contact information.
- Jury members will participate in ongoing Jury discussions.
- Anyone may submit a title for consideration.

October 20th is the last day to request reading copies via the ALA office staff.

November (1-15 approximately) a phone conference call will be held to vote for a short list of books members consider worthy of an award.
- To supplement the virtual discussion, conference calls or virtual meetings take place to vote for short list.
- Chair will compile titles and develop a “Consideration List” and send it to all committee members via the listserv.

ALA Midwinter
- Meeting held at mutually agreed time on Friday afternoon to select the winners
- The Jury will meet on Sunday to confidentially notify winners.
- The Jury will meet to prepare press release
- Attend press conference held on Monday morning. The Jury will meet in a specific area designated by the ALA Press Office for pictures and walk in as a group and sit in an assigned area.
- Post Midwinter the Jury will work on citations.

June. ALA Annual.
- Attend luncheon hosted by Dr. Schneider for the current Schneider Family Book Award winners, their publishers, the ALA liaison, and Jury members.
- The Schneider Family Book Award plaques are presented to the winners at the ALA Awards ceremony, Sunday before the ALA President’s Program
- Award/President’s Reception, Sunday, 5:30 – 7:00 p.m.

How to Spot a Great Picture Book

Dilys Evans has been providing advice to young artists since 1978, when she founded Dilys Evans Fine Illustration. Below is a summary of that advice—10 characteristics that she believes all outstanding picture books have in common. Use it as a guide as you evaluate the picture books in your collection.

1. In the Beginning Was the Word
   The pictures must be truly inspired by the story.

2. Preparation Is Paramount
   The artist knows his or her characters, subject, and the setting inside and out.
3. A Great Cover Is a Great Start
   If the cover art is compelling, it will make the viewer pick up the book and turn the pages.

4. The Artist Sets the Scene before the Story Begins
   The inside flap offers a great opportunity to set the stage for the story or introduce a character.

5. The Endpapers Involve the Reader
   Endpapers are another opportunity to add to the story or overall design of the book.

6. The Medium Is the Message
   The perfect choice of medium to illustrate the text should convey every mood and nuance.

7. Every Picture Tells the Story
   Every image is central to the story and moves it forward to the next page.

8. The Book Is a Form of Dramatic Art
   Every scene must be carefully chosen to dully illustrate the drama and excitement of the story as it unfolds.

9. Art and Type Should Be a Perfect Marriage
   The typeface should seem to be almost an extension of the art itself.

10. White Space Rules!
    White space is a compositional element and not just a background to present the art.
