ACRL 2008
Excellence in Academic Libraries
Award Winners

McMaster University Libraries

McMaster University Libraries exemplifies a successful transformation from a traditional research library to an innovative, user-centered library using technological advances to accomplish its goals.

Laurence McKinley Gould Library at Carleton College

The Gould Library at Carleton College was recognized for working hard in a team atmosphere in order to provide a welcoming environment for its students and faculty by utilizing technology to enhance space, services, and resources.

Shatford Library at Pasadena City College

Innovative is the best word to describe why Shatford Library won this award. The library excels in its information competency work and provides new technologies to advance the academic success of its students.

Applications for the 2009 ACRL Excellence in Academic Libraries Award are due December 5, 2008. Please see the “Awards” section of the ACRL Web site at www.ala.org/acrl for more information.
