Libraries are:

An important part of the campus
learning community

Connecting
students and faculty with a world of knowledge

Investing in the future while preserving the past

Anne Arundel Community College

Librarians developed unique strategies for meeting the needs of the students through a creative information literacy program. Their “colleagues in learning” approach gave new meaning to the concept of a learning community.

Oberlin College

Librarians have a tradition of leadership excellence on campus and in the profession. They have a model program for recognizing student workers and recruiting student library assistants into academic librarianship.

Cornell University

Librarians are building a cutting edge digital library and are generous in sharing the lessons learned with the wider higher education community. They have a commitment to transforming scholarly communication.
