No other professional community offers information professionals a better opportunity to learn about current issues and trends in the field than the American Library Association. Every year, thousands of information professionals from around the world engage with colleagues as International members.

ALA International members enjoy discounts on conference registration along with special access to ALA publications, discounted online Continuing Education sessions, and networking options. You are invited to participate in this global association for libraries.
Maximizing Your Return on International Membership

Personal membership in the American Library Association is available for librarians and library workers practicing outside of the United States at discounted rates. International members receive full rights and privileges of ALA membership including eligibility to serve on committees, run for office and join any division or round table. The American Library Association will also extend official letters of invitation to our International Members upon request.

To become an International Member of the American Library Association or to learn more about specific programs, services and member benefits, please call 1-312-280-4299 for our Member and Customer Service Center; visit www.ala.org/membership; email membership@ala.org; or mail the attached application to:
