Greetings from the President:

It's now spring and FAFLRT is gearing up for the ALA Annual Conference in Anaheim! We've got three great programs planned, including Managing your Federal Career, Disaster Response Lessons Learned, and Social Media in Federal Libraries. We'll also be holding our annual Membership meeting and the FAFLRT Awards Reception. All of our programs and events will be over the weekend and in the same hotel so it will be easy to find and enjoy each one.

We're trying something different this year, holding the Awards Reception at lunchtime so that you don't have to choose between that and all the great evening activities at ALA Annual. Don't forget; you still have a few more weeks to get your award nominations in! There are plenty of Fabulous Feds who deserve recognition and this is your chance to help them get it. The award nomination forms are posted on the FAFLRT Awards web page at http://www.ala.org/faflrt/initiatives/awards

We've closed out the Membership Survey we held last month, and appreciate the feedback we received. Don't hesitate to continue letting the FAFLRT Executive Board know what's on your mind and what you want from the Round Table. You can use the Feedback form on the ALA website at http://www.ala.org/faflrt/feedback, send us a message through ALA Connect, or contact any of the FAFLRT Executive Board or Committee Chairpersons listed on the last page of this newsletter.

And speaking of the FAFLRT Committees, please consider joining one or more of FAFLRT’s committees. We are looking for new ideas and can always use help keeping the Round Table active and useful to the membership.

Thanks again for your interest in FAFLRT. We look forward to hearing from you!

Vicky Crone

Author Visit and Book Signing at NAS Fort Worth JRB Library

February 9th Dr. J’Nell Pate was the library’s guest author for her book: Arsenal of Defense: Fort Worth’s Military Legacy. Present and past base commanders were on hand to meet Mrs. Pate and she talked about her research and interest in Fort Worth’s history - from a fort to an air power. Lots of stories were shared by attendees and books were available for signing.
FAFLRT Award Nominations
Due: April 16, 2012

FAFLRT is fortunate to have talented and knowledgeable professionals who make important contributions to librarianship and the federal information community. Your dedication is also helping to ensure the future of federal librarianship. FAFLRT provides a number of opportunities to recognize professional excellence and also support and encourage the next generation of librarians through several special awards:

The FAFLRT Distinguished Service Award recognizes a FAFLRT member for outstanding and sustained contributions to FAFLRT.

The FAFLRT Achievement Award recognizes an individual for achievement in the promotion of library and information services and the information profession in the federal community. FAFLRT membership is not required but only FAFLRT members can make nominations.

The Federal Librarians Adelaide Del Frate Conference Sponsorship Award is given to a library school student who has an interest in working in a federal library. The student will receive a scholarship award of $1,000. Students who are currently enrolled in any ALA-accredited library school, who do not already have an ALA accredited degree, and who have expressed an interest in some aspect of federal librarianship are eligible. Students nominate themselves for this award and must provide a letter of reference.

The Federal Librarian Cicely Phippen Marks Scholarship is given to a library school student who has an interest in working in a federal library. The student will receive a scholarship award of $1,500. Students who are currently enrolled in any ALA-accredited library school, who do not already have an ALA accredited degree, and who have expressed an interest in some aspect of federal librarianship are eligible. Students nominate themselves for this award and must provide a letter of reference.

Mr. Casey Grimmer joins the Torii Station, Okinawa, Japan, from the American University in Cairo (AUC) where he served as the Head of Research and Information Services in the Libraries and Learning Technologies Department.

Mr. Grimmer holds a B.A. in American history from Western Illinois University at Macomb, Illinois; an M.S., also in American history, from Illinois State University; and an M.L.S. from the University of Illinois. He joined the AUC library as a Web Services / Reference librarian in the spring of 2006 and was appointed Head of Research and Information Services in the fall of 2008.

Prior to joining AUC, Mr. Grimmer spent ten years as a librarian and computer systems administrator with the University of Maryland University College (UMUC), at both their College Park campus and the Naval Postgraduate School (NPS). He joined the UMUC library Web site and also participated in faculty training and the design of WebTycho, UMUC’s proprietary distance education delivery system.

Mr. Tae Minn has retired from his position as Library Director at Osan AB in Korea.

Dr. Arlene Luster has left her position as Library Director at Wiesbaden, Germany in December 2011 and returned to Hawaii.

Mr. Charles (Charlie) Gorday has retired from the Technical Library of the Naval Nuclear Power Training Command (NNPTC) in Newport, RI. He worked in Armenia, Jordan, Syria in the late 1990s, at the Naval Postgraduate School in Zelenograd and Nizhnii Novgorod from 1994 to 1996 and has lived and worked in Moscow, Zelenograd and Nizhnii Novgorod from 1994 to 1996 and has lived and worked in Armenia, Jordan, Syria and Israel.

Ms. Maryellen Trautman retired from the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) in December 2011 after devoting her career to supporting public access to government documents and publications. Ms. Trautman served as the primary librarian responsible as completing 28 years at the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Dr. Allen C. Benson, Library Director, Naval War College, recently published a research paper in B & D: textos universitaris de biblioteconomia i documentacio, an electronic library and information science journal available on the web. This journal is an open access journal published by the oldest library science school in Spain, 'Escola Universitaria de Biblioteconomia i Documentacio', University of Barcelona. The title of the paper is “Capturing relationships expressed in image descriptions: A preliminary investigation,” Issue No. 27 (Dec. 2011), http://www.ud.edu/bid/27/benson2.htm.

Ms. Susan Cornacchia, formerly a Reference and Instruction Librarian at the U.S. Coast Guard Academy Library in New London, CT, assumed the position of Digital Initiatives Librarian at the Naval War College Library in Newport, RI, in June 2011. In this role, Susan will lead their digitization efforts and projects.

Mr. Michael McHenry has been promoted to the position of Metadata and Integrated Library Systems Librarian at the Naval War College Library in Newport, RI. In this role, Mr. McHenry will be responsible for maintaining the library’s two ILS’s as well as providing metadata for our digital objects. This is a new position which will fill a critical need for systems support.

The Dudley Knox Library (DKL), Naval Postgraduate School reports that Ms. Valerie Moule, Associate University Librarian, received the Navy Meritorious Service Award for exemplary service to DKL and the Naval Postgraduate School.

The library also has the following new hires, Mr. Stacy DeMattei, Library Systems Manager and Mr. Tom Doughty, Metadata Services Manager. DKL staff recently promoted are, Ms. Irene Berry, Digital Services Librarian, Ms. Tenly Connor, Restricted Resources & Services Library Technician, Mr. Sherri McMullin, Access Services Library Technician and Mr. Matthew White, Purchasing Agent. Also, Ms. Mary Ann Watson, Metadata Services Library Technician has retired.

Mr. John Crawford arrived as the new Reference/Outreach Librarian (Russian language) on January 30 at The George C. Marshall European Center for Security Studies Library, Garmisch, Germany. He comes from a position in the Dugway Post Library, Utah.

He had previously worked as an Adjunct Instructor – Utah Valley University and as reference librarian at the Orem Public Library. He received a Master’s degree in Library and Information Science - University of Alabama and a Master’s degree in Near Eastern Studies – John Hopkins University.

Mr. Crawford lived in Moscow, Zelenograd and Nizhnii Novgorod from 1994 to 1996 and has lived and worked in Armenia, Jordan, Syria and Israel.

Ms. Maryellen Trautman retired from the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) in December 2011 after devoting her career to supporting public access to government documents and publications. Ms. Trautman served as the primary librarian responsible for government publications.

for the government publications collection at the NARA Library from June 1978 to December 2011.

She served on the Depository Library Council to the Public Printer from 1972 to 1976 and also served as the regional depository librarian in Oklahoma from October 1976 to December 1977. Ms. Trautman was one of the founders of the Government Documents Round Table and was honored with GODORT’s Bernadine Abbott Hodaski Founders Award.

She was active in the Association of American Archivists, the District of Columbia Library Association (as membership secretary, chair of the Documents Interest Group, and recipient of the DCLA award for service), and the Society for History in the Federal Government (as Executive Director). The society honored her several times and in 2003 re-named the president’s award to the Maryellen Trautman Award.

Ms. Trautman represented NARA on the U.S. Congressional Joint Committee on Printing’s Serial Set Committee. She produced the bumper sticker “NARS makes me tingle” that became the battle cry for the independence of the National Archives and Records Administration from the General Services Administration and supported international access to government information by editing a series of proceedings of the seminars organized by the IFLA Section on Government Information and Official Publications.

Ms. Elaine Cline, former Chief Librarian at the Ralph J. Bunche Library at the U.S. State Department passed away January 16, 2012 after a long battle with cancer. Elaine, as many of you know, was funny, generous, and warm. During the last two years she enjoyed a happy retirement full of grandchildren and travel. Prior to retirement, her career was varied and admirable. After earning her MLS at the University of Michigan, she was librarian at Hope College and later at Augsburg College, where she planned and built the Library and Information Technology Center, which opened in 1997. She then served as Librarian of the National Air and Space Museum Branch and assistant library director for information literacy at the DC Public Library. She finished out her career as Chief Librarian of the Ralph J. Bunche Library at the State Department, where she led her staff capably and with great humor.

Elaine touched many lives, and this is a great loss to the library community.

Harry Potter Weekend – RAF Alconbury, UK

The RAF Alconbury Base Library hosted a highly successful Harry Potter Weekend over January 28 and 29th. Over 125 people came to shop for wands and spell books in Diagon Alley as well as find their Hogwarts House and Patronus and even play a game of wizard’s chess. Several kids wished there could be a Harry Potter weekend every weekend.

Naval Observatory Finds, Donates Rare Volume for Jefferson Library

The empty black boxes on the shelves in the exhibition of Thomas Jefferson’s library serve as a constant reminder of books long ago lost to the Library of Congress.

For one visitor, the boxes represented the opposite: an opportunity to restore to the Library a title lost 161 years ago, a volume curators had sought for more than a decade.

Sally Bosken, a librarian at the U.S. Naval Observatory, attended a meeting at the Library of Congress in 2005 and decided to check out the Jefferson exhibit. There, she recognized the title on the spine of a box as an edition that the observatory — she was almost certain — held in its own collections.

Bosken knew immediately what she had to do.

“Tought, this is wonderful,” Bosken said. “What an honorable thing for us to be able to give one of our books to the Library.”

On Jan. 20, the observatory did just that, donating a copy of “Figura Telluris de Maupertuis” to the Library of Congress in a ceremony in its circular, high-domed library perched on a hilltop across from the residence of the vice president of the United States.

The donation of the book, a work on astronomy by French mathematician and philosopher Pierre-Louis Moreau de Maupertuis published in 1742, marked a first: The observatory is the only federal agency ever to contribute a volume to the Library of Congress’s ongoing effort to reconstruct the library of Thomas Jefferson.

In 1815, Jefferson sold 6,487 books from his personal library to Congress — volumes that became the foundation of the Library of Congress collections.

A fire destroyed two-thirds of those books in 1851, and the Library 14 years ago began a project to re-create Jefferson’s library by seeking out identical editions of titles lost in the blaze.

After more than a decade of searching, only about 270 books remain to be located — and the donation from the observatory puts the project one small, Latin volume closer to completion.

“When the Library launched the project to reconstruct Thomas Jefferson’s library in 1998, I had hoped that we would have moments just like this, when historic government agencies and libraries would locate in their own collections a book that would allow us to complete Thomas Jefferson’s grand library,” Librarian of Congress James H. Billington told an audience of Navy officers, astronomers, librarians and representatives of the French and Finnish embassies.

Bosken knew “Figura” existed in the library at the U.S. Naval Observatory, a facility charged with providing critical navigation and precision time information to the military and scientific groups.

What she didn’t know until she examined the Jefferson exhibit was that “Figura” was part of the original collection — and that it still was missing.

Bosken returned to the observatory to make certain that her copy was the same edition as the one owned by Jefferson. It was.

“This is the right one. How amazing,” she said. “I was so excited about it.”

Boeken approached Mark Dimunation, the chief of Rare Book and Special Collections at the Library of Congress, and her supervisors at the observatory about the possibility of donating the book.

Following a review, the donation was approved by Capt. Timothy C. Galleau, the superintendent of the observatory. The ceremony last month made the transfer official.

"It's a wonderful book to have here in our collection, but how much nicer to have it available to scholars from all over the world who use the Library of Congress," Boeken said.

"Figura Telluris de Maupertuis," the product of a scientific expedition by Maupertuis to modern-day Finland in 1736, sought to resolve a controversy over the shape of the Earth.

Some scientists held that the Earth was prolate, or a tall, skinny sphere — like a rugby ball stood on end.

Maupertuis and others believed the planet to be oblate, or short, fat and somewhat flat at the poles. The argument advanced by Maupertuis in "Figura," based on measurements he made in Finland, carried the day.

"This book is amazing: This book proves the Earth is flat," Rear Adm. Jonathan W. White said, joking, in presenting the volume to Billington.

"We're not just transferring a book," White said. "We're transferring a foundation of knowledge and exploration that's maintained by both of these great institutions."

The book, ordered by Jefferson in 1789 while he served as the U.S. ambassador to France, perfectly suited his interests: Jefferson considered the study of astronomy nearly as important as that of architecture — a subject he held in the highest of regard.

"It's a title that reflects Jefferson's buying in Paris and his applied scientific interests," Dimunation said. "Anytime we bring in materials that go outside Jefferson's political interest, it helps us round out the story of Jefferson as a man of the Enlightenment."

Only about 2,000 of the 6,487 books Jefferson sold to the Library survived the 1851 fire. Editions identical to 3,000 of the destroyed books were found in the Library's collections after the Jefferson project began in 1998.

"That left nearly 1,500 books to be located and acquired — a list now down to a few hundred."

"The going is slower now. The remaining books on the list are, naturally, the ones hardest to find."

"Like Jefferson, we had a very big couple of years where books just come in by the boxload," Dimunation said. "Now, it's turned into a trickle."

Most additions are made by purchase, with a handful of donations — but never, until now, a gift from another federal agency.

Any book the Library acquires for the Jefferson library now is one that, by definition, it's been seeking for the 14 years since the project began.

But as much as he liked scratching an exceptionally tough-to-find title like "Figura" off the wanted list, Dimunation says, he also simply appreciates the spirit of the observatory's gift.

"It's really a terrific gesture on the part of colleagues to participate in this," Dimunation said. "The Naval Observatory is an ideal institution to cooperate in this effort. Jefferson would be very pleased."

FAFLRT Award Winners and Former Officers Retire

This fall, four winners of the FAFLRT Distinguished Service Award retired after lengthy and valued careers in the federal government.

Fran Perros retired at the end of October 2011 as the Chief Librarian at the State Department’s Ralph J. Bunch Library. Fran began her career as a military librarian serving in Germany and in the U.S. where she was, among other positions, the Chief Acquisitions Librarian for the Department of Army’s Central Book Selection Program. She also served as the Branch Chief for Technical Services at the Department of Transportation Library and became the Chief of the Information Resources Branch of the State Department Library in 1989. She received her MLS from the University of Michigan in 1971. Fran was an active member of the Federal Library and Information Center Committee (FLICC) and served on the OCLC Council. As a longtime FLRT and FAFLRT member, Fran served on the Board of Directors and as Secretary. Along with Jewel Player, Fran helped to write the bylaws for FAFLRT. Jewel won the Distinguished Service Award in 2005.

Maria Pisa retired on December 31 as Associate Director for Public Services, National Agricultural Library (NAL). A graduate of Catholic University Library School, Maria spent most of her career working in the Public Services Division of NAL and was the Associate Director since 1995. Maria was active in the federal library community including serving on the FLICC Executive Board and the EPA Library Advisory Committee. Internationally, she has worked with libraries in Central and Eastern Europe, Mexico, Latin America and the Caribbean, and Canada to promote library collaborations that enhance access to agricultural information. Maria is a past president of FAFLRT and has been co-chair, with Shirley Loo, of the FAFLRT Awards Committee for many years. Maria received the Distinguished Service Award in 2007.

Jewel Player retired December 31 as Chief of the Copyright Acquisitions Division, U.S. Copyright Office at the Library of Congress. She also began her career as a military librarian serving in Korea, the Pentagon Library, and as Chief of the Army Material Command Library before moving to the Copyright Office. Jewel served on the Board of Directors and was President of AFLRT and went on to serve as the President of FAFLRT. Along with Fran Perros, she helped write the bylaws for FAFLRT. Jewel won the Distinguished Service Award in 2005.

Jane Sessa retired as Departmental Librarian of the Department of Commerce on December 31. She received her MLS from Catholic University in 1976 and an MBA from American University in 1986. Jane was the Librarian at the Congressional Budget Office for many years and won the CBO Director’s Award in 1986. She moved from CBO to become the Library Director at the Securities and Exchange Commission before moving to the Department of Commerce. She, too, was an active member of the federal library community, was a longtime FLICC member, and was a member of the Fedlink Advisory Committee. Jane served on the Board of Directors and as President of FLRT. She has edited the Federal Librarian for many years. She received the Distinguished Service Award in 2001.
