ABOUT THE LIBRARY HISTORY ROUND TABLE

The Library History Round Table (LHRT) was founded in 1947 to commemorate great library leaders of the past and to celebrate the importance of libraries in society. Since then, LHRT members have critically examined libraries and their services in light of class, culture, gender, geography, race, and other perspectives. LHRT is an inclusive and diverse organization that supports anyone who is interested in the history of libraries.

LHRT strives to further the study of history of libraries and reading through both thought-provoking programs and monetary awards for outstanding research. We encourage library schools to incorporate historical content and methodology in their curricula and to support students who are doing historical research. Through involvement in LHRT we offer members the opportunity to network with colleagues interested in library history.

LHRT members include:

- Librarians, archivists, curators, and others doing historical research
- LIS students with a background or interest in history
- Faculty in LIS, the humanities, and related disciplines
- Administrators, staff, and volunteers working in historic libraries
- Retirees
