HAPPY READING!

SORTING IT OUT

BEHIND THE SCENES
AT THE LIBRARY
A ZINE BY
LUKE W. HENDERSON

---

Luke W. Henderson is a writer of comics, short stories and poetry and a library truck driver living in St. Louis, MO.

-- Linktr.ee/lukewhenderson
One of my favorite things about the library is that you can get books anywhere.

From across your city...

...your county...

...even throughout the country via the interlibrary loan system.

That everyone should have access to knowledge and enjoyment no matter where they’re located.

If you need it, and someone has it, we’ll get it.
But those books have to be picked up from the branches somehow and then be sorted...

THAT'S WHERE I COME IN!

BUT I LOVE IT!

EVEN THOUGH WE DON'T INTERACT WITH THE PATRONS MUCH, WE PROVIDE A VITAL SERVICE.

I THINK IT'S COOL HOW MUCH GOES INTO ENSURING THAT EVERYONE HAS ACCESS TO BOOKS—

KEWL
Everyday, my coworkers and I go to the several branches of our library and collect books going to other places.

Then, we sort them by hand and with our fancy sorting machine.

Sometimes it can get a bit hectic, especially during summer reading programs...

...and the beginning of the year (I see you making a resolution to read more this year; you can do it!).