13:17:41 From Leigh Peake to Everyone:

Thinking a bit about the topic of this webinar ("Using Census Data in Public Library Programming"), wondering if you've seen some of these activities being particularly good/appropriate for implementation in public libraries? We can of course experiment, but curious if you have thoughts. Thanks!

13:18:57 From Rebecca Fitzgerald to Everyone:

I was also wondering the same thing - I'm guessing it will get into more public library relevance in a little bit?

13:19:01 From Syeira Anthony to Everyone:

I have two teachers in my family. How does a teacher become an ambassador, and what is the criteria?

13:19:27 From Karen Brown to Everyone:

Thanks for the great questions. We're capturing your questions to ask panelists after they have all presented.

13:26:20 From Sara White to Everyone:
Who created the curriculum? Were these classes held at the library or in schools/community spaces?

13:29:12 From Kimberley Glascoe to Sara White and all panelists:
Hi Sara, Teachers and subject matter experts from across the country help develop and review each and every SIS activity to make sure it is valuable, engaging, relatable, and easy to use.

13:34:36 From Mei Choong to Hosts and panelists:
My apologies. My laptop is running out of battery and I don't have a charging station nearby. Will wait for the recording. Great presentation so far.

13:41:57 From Sara White to Everyone:
Question: How did you get teens on board with participating in this project? How did you sell it?

13:42:11 From Syeira Anthony to Everyone:
Sara, that is a great question!

13:42:52 From Karen Brown to Everyone:
And, we'll ask Tess when she finishes her presentation.

13:43:34 From Andrea Davidson to Hosts and panelists:
Does anyone have some guidance on modifying these data literacy activities for post-secondary students? Any resources for youth who have been traumatized by data? I'm thinking in particular of Indigenous youth who have experienced trauma associated with being registered by government officials?
