

Free Reference Resources:

General

- U.S. Census Bureau: government statistical data
- Weather Underground: current detailed weather reports and historical data
- USA.gov: online guide to government information and services
- Central Intelligence Agency: government facts, news and information
- Google Translate: translate words into a variety of languages
- ResearchBuzz: news and resources covering social media, search engines, databases, archives and other information collections
- Wikipedia: useful for basic facts and information

Entertainment (including books)

- Fantastic Fiction: bibliographies for over 50,000 authors and information on over 600,000 books
- RerunCentury: free public domain videos and 20th century TV shows, including historical information of network channel lineups
- What's Next: database when looking for order of books in a series
- GoodReads: social networking site that contains basic information, reviews and user posted reviews on thousands of books
- IMBD: information about movies, actors, television shows and other information related to screen entertainment

Scholarly Information:

- Google Scholar: Google search engine that searches scholarly articles
- Legal Information Institute: resource for finding laws, materials that help people understand the law and law related facts and information
- Digital Commons Network: database that brings together free, full-text scholarly articles from colleges and universities around the world, including journal articles, book chapters, dissertations, working papers, conference proceedings and more
- Community Commons: provides a way to compile information about specific community issues together, including data, tools and stories
- American Memory Project: project from the Library of Congress that offers free and open access to text, sound recordings, images, prints, maps and music that document the American experience

Medical

- MedlinePlus: a site from the U.S. National Library of Medicine that provides trusted health information on diseases, drugs, procedures and more
- DailyMed: a site from the U.S. National Library of Medicine that contains drug listing information
- PillBox: a database maintained by the U.S. National Library of Medicine that allows you to look up pills by identifying information, such as color, shape, imprint and more
- LactMed: a site from the U.S. National Library of Medicine that contains information on drugs and other chemicals that breastfeeding mothers may be exposed to

Aggregated Websites

- Free Resources LibGuide: this LibGuide contains links to free resources in a variety of categories and is maintained by the Florida Atlantic University Libraries