

Dust Bowl Exhibit Panel Fronts

DUST, DROUGHT, AND DREAMS GONE DRY

In the 1930s, people in the Great Plains were hit hard by drought and dust storms. Many people lost their homes and jobs. The drought was the worst in the United States since 1862. It was caused by a combination of factors, including a long period of dry weather and a severe drought in 1934. The drought was followed by a series of dust storms that blew across the plains, covering everything in a thick layer of dust. This led to the migration of many people to other parts of the country.

Humans and the Ecology of the Plains

The Great Plains were home to a variety of people, including Native Americans, settlers, and cowboys. The ecology of the plains was shaped by the actions of these people. For example, the introduction of cattle led to the overgrazing of the land, which contributed to the drought. The construction of railroads also changed the landscape, as they allowed for the transport of goods and people across the continent.

People of the Plains

The Great Plains were home to a diverse group of people. Native Americans lived on the plains for centuries, and their culture was shaped by the land. Settlers came to the plains in the 19th century, and they brought with them new technologies and ways of life. Cowboys were also a prominent part of the plains culture, and they played a key role in the development of the region.

Artists of the Plains

The Great Plains have inspired many artists, including painters, writers, and photographers. Artists have captured the beauty and harshness of the plains in their work. For example, the famous painting 'American Gothic' by J.M.W. Turner depicts a farmer plowing a field with a horse-drawn plow. The novel 'The Grapes of Wrath' by John Steinbeck tells the story of a family that is forced to migrate during the drought.

Voices of the Plains

The Great Plains have a rich history, and the voices of the people who lived there are still heard today. Through letters, diaries, and oral histories, we can learn about the lives of the people who lived on the plains. These voices tell us about the challenges they faced and the dreams they held for the future.

Drought

The drought of the 1930s was a devastating event that changed the lives of millions of people. It was caused by a combination of factors, including a long period of dry weather and a severe drought in 1934. The drought was followed by a series of dust storms that blew across the plains, covering everything in a thick layer of dust. This led to the migration of many people to other parts of the country.

Railroad, Farms, and American Dreams

The Great Plains were transformed by the construction of railroads and the arrival of settlers. Railroads allowed for the transport of goods and people across the continent, and they played a key role in the development of the region. Settlers came to the plains in the 19th century, and they brought with them new technologies and ways of life. The American Dream of owning a farm and a piece of land was a powerful motivator for many people.

Machines and Markets over Nature

The Great Plains were transformed by the introduction of new technologies and the arrival of markets. The construction of railroads and the arrival of settlers led to the development of the region. The introduction of new technologies, such as the tractor and the combine, allowed for the production of more food. The arrival of markets allowed for the sale of goods and the growth of the economy.

Changing the Land

The Great Plains have been transformed by the actions of people. The construction of railroads and the arrival of settlers led to the development of the region. The introduction of new technologies and the arrival of markets allowed for the production of more food and the growth of the economy. The land has been changed in many ways, and the impact of these changes is still felt today.

False Dawn

The Great Plains have a rich history, and the voices of the people who lived there are still heard today. Through letters, diaries, and oral histories, we can learn about the lives of the people who lived on the plains. These voices tell us about the challenges they faced and the dreams they held for the future.

Dust Bowl Exhibit Panel Backs

No More Rain

The drought and the resulting dust storms were a disaster for the people of the Great Plains. Many farmers lost their crops and their homes. The dust storms were so bad that they could be seen from space.

The drought and the resulting dust storms were a disaster for the people of the Great Plains. Many farmers lost their crops and their homes. The dust storms were so bad that they could be seen from space.

11

Black Sotday

Black Sotday was the worst dust storm of the Dust Bowl. It was so bad that it was called 'Black Sotday' because it was so dark and so thick with dust that it was like a black storm.

12

Dust

Dust was everywhere. It was in the air, on the ground, and on everything. It was so bad that it was called 'Dust'.

13

Enduring

Enduring was the name of the book that told the story of the Dust Bowl. It was written by a woman who had lived through the Dust Bowl.

14

Difficult Decisions

Difficult Decisions was the name of the book that told the story of the Dust Bowl. It was written by a woman who had lived through the Dust Bowl.

15

The Art of the Dust Bowl

The Art of the Dust Bowl was the name of the book that told the story of the Dust Bowl. It was written by a woman who had lived through the Dust Bowl.

16

Looking for Answers

Looking for Answers was the name of the book that told the story of the Dust Bowl. It was written by a woman who had lived through the Dust Bowl.

17

Government Programs

Government Programs was the name of the book that told the story of the Dust Bowl. It was written by a woman who had lived through the Dust Bowl.

18

Stopping the Dust Bowl

Stopping the Dust Bowl was the name of the book that told the story of the Dust Bowl. It was written by a woman who had lived through the Dust Bowl.

19

The Plains Today

The Plains Today was the name of the book that told the story of the Dust Bowl. It was written by a woman who had lived through the Dust Bowl.

20